Drinking Water Safety

Community Based Drinking Water Quality Monitoring Program

Community Based Drinking Water Monitors (CBWM) play a key role in the Drinking Water Safety Program as the designated person responsible for sampling, testing, recording and communicating the microbiological quality of drinking water within the community. The CBWM is also responsible for distributing results and may assist with developing and carrying out a drinking water quality awareness program.

The CBWM may be a Community Health Representative (CHR), Water Treatment Plant Operator (WTPO), or another individual selected by the Band. If a community does not have a CBWM, the activities may be completed by the FNHA Environmental Health Officer or an FNHA Environmental Health Technician.

Environmental Health Officers train CBWMs to sample and test the drinking water for potential microbial contamination using community lab equipment (Colilert®). WaterTrax®, an internet-based data management system, is used to securely manage all drinking water quality data to which the CBWM, Band Health Directors, and the Drinking Water Safety Program (DWSP) team have access.

lessLIE: Salish Modern/Tradition

On view at Teck Gallery SFU Galleries until September 25, 2022

Teck Gallery is located in SFU's Harbour Centre
at 515 West Hastings Street
Open 10 am – 6 pm
Monday – Saturday

These seven acrylic paintings on paper — all recent acquisitions to the SFU Art Collection from the Salish Weave Collection of Christiane and George Smyth — re-interpret traditional Coast Salish stories through a lens of contemporary urgencies like the accelerating ecological crisis and capitalist greed. Compositionally, they draw from lessLIE's close study of spindle whorls — important elements of Coast Salish weaving technology and tools of cultural communication — through his deft use of colour and positive and negative space. Together, these paintings propose a new form of literacy that mediate between the written English language, Coast Salish Oral Traditions, and visuality, which underscore the artist's ongoing process, as he asserts, to "accept literacy on my own terms."

Terrence Campbell (Tahltan), assorted Sterling Silver jewelry

Unique Silver Pieces by Terrence Campbell

Terrence was born in Prince Rupert, British Columbia, Canada. He is from the Wolf Clan of the Tahltan Nation. His Tahltan name, Ithskoski, means "teacher of the children," and has materialized in his teaching of both art and karate.

His interest in art started when he was very young. At nine years old, he announced his goal of becoming an artist. When Terrence was 15, he took a two-week carving course with Tahltan-Tlingit artist Dempsey Bob but never pursued it. Then at the age of 22, he resumed carving under the tutelage of his sister, Dale Campbell.

During recent years, Terrence has been using modern designer clothing, as well as traditional button blankets, as his artistic medium for creating the symbols of First Nation's culture and crest. He practices traditional culture and has respect for the Elders, other people and the world around him. His goal is to pass on to the next generation the gifts and knowledge that were passed down to him. Recently, Terrence has made art his full-time occupation and has taken up residence in Vancouver.
